PIRATE

1970 PIRATE

*James Bowie High School
Simms, Texas*

Foreword

Bronson Alcott defined a good book as that which is opened with expectation, and closed with delight and profit.

The Staff and I sincerely hope that the 1970 PIRATE meets these qualifications.

Judy Hammonds

Editor

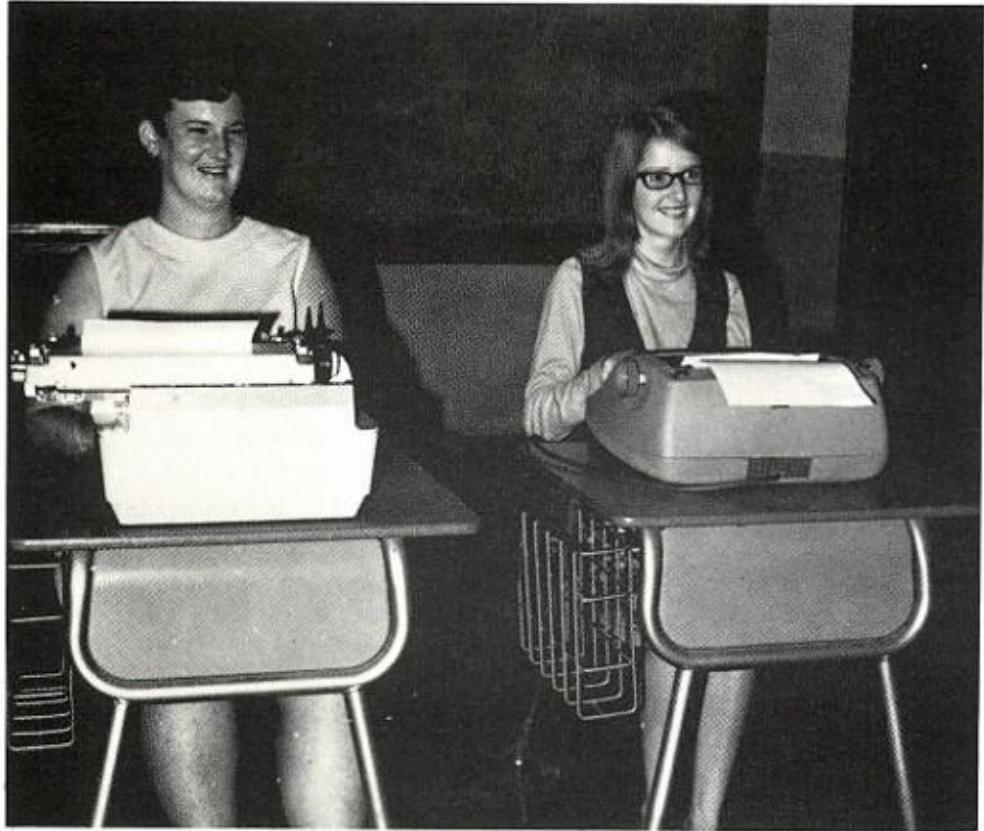

Whether sloshing through steaming Asian jungles, breaking a snow trail on European mountains, or patrolling icy enemy seas, the men of the Armed Forces stand apart from most men. Yet, they are the same, sharing the same home and families and dreams and joys of other men.

What makes these servicemen unique? Is it the selfless bravery in the face of black and terrible death? Is it a nobility that characterizes these modern-day knights in flak vests and helmets? Is it an abrupt manhood forced upon them on a dark and ominous night when they learn what it is to splatter some fellow human's guts on a tree or over the ground? Could it be the encompassing loneliness coming of cold, hunger, despair, and the feeling that no one really cares?

There are those who care. Just how much they are concerned could never be put into insignificant, puny words. Therefore, we of the 1969-1970 James Bowie Pirate staff dedicate this yearbook to you, the men of the Armed Forces, and thus we hope we can, in some infinitely small way, show that our thoughts, dreams, and prayers are with each of you.

Mr. Hawkins received an award for outstanding contributions to the James Bowie PTA.

The "69" Seniors have departed, but in some ways they are still with us. By leaving a trail well marked, this class carried out their motto to the fullest. Now it is up to all of us to see that the path is well trod and that new ones are opened.

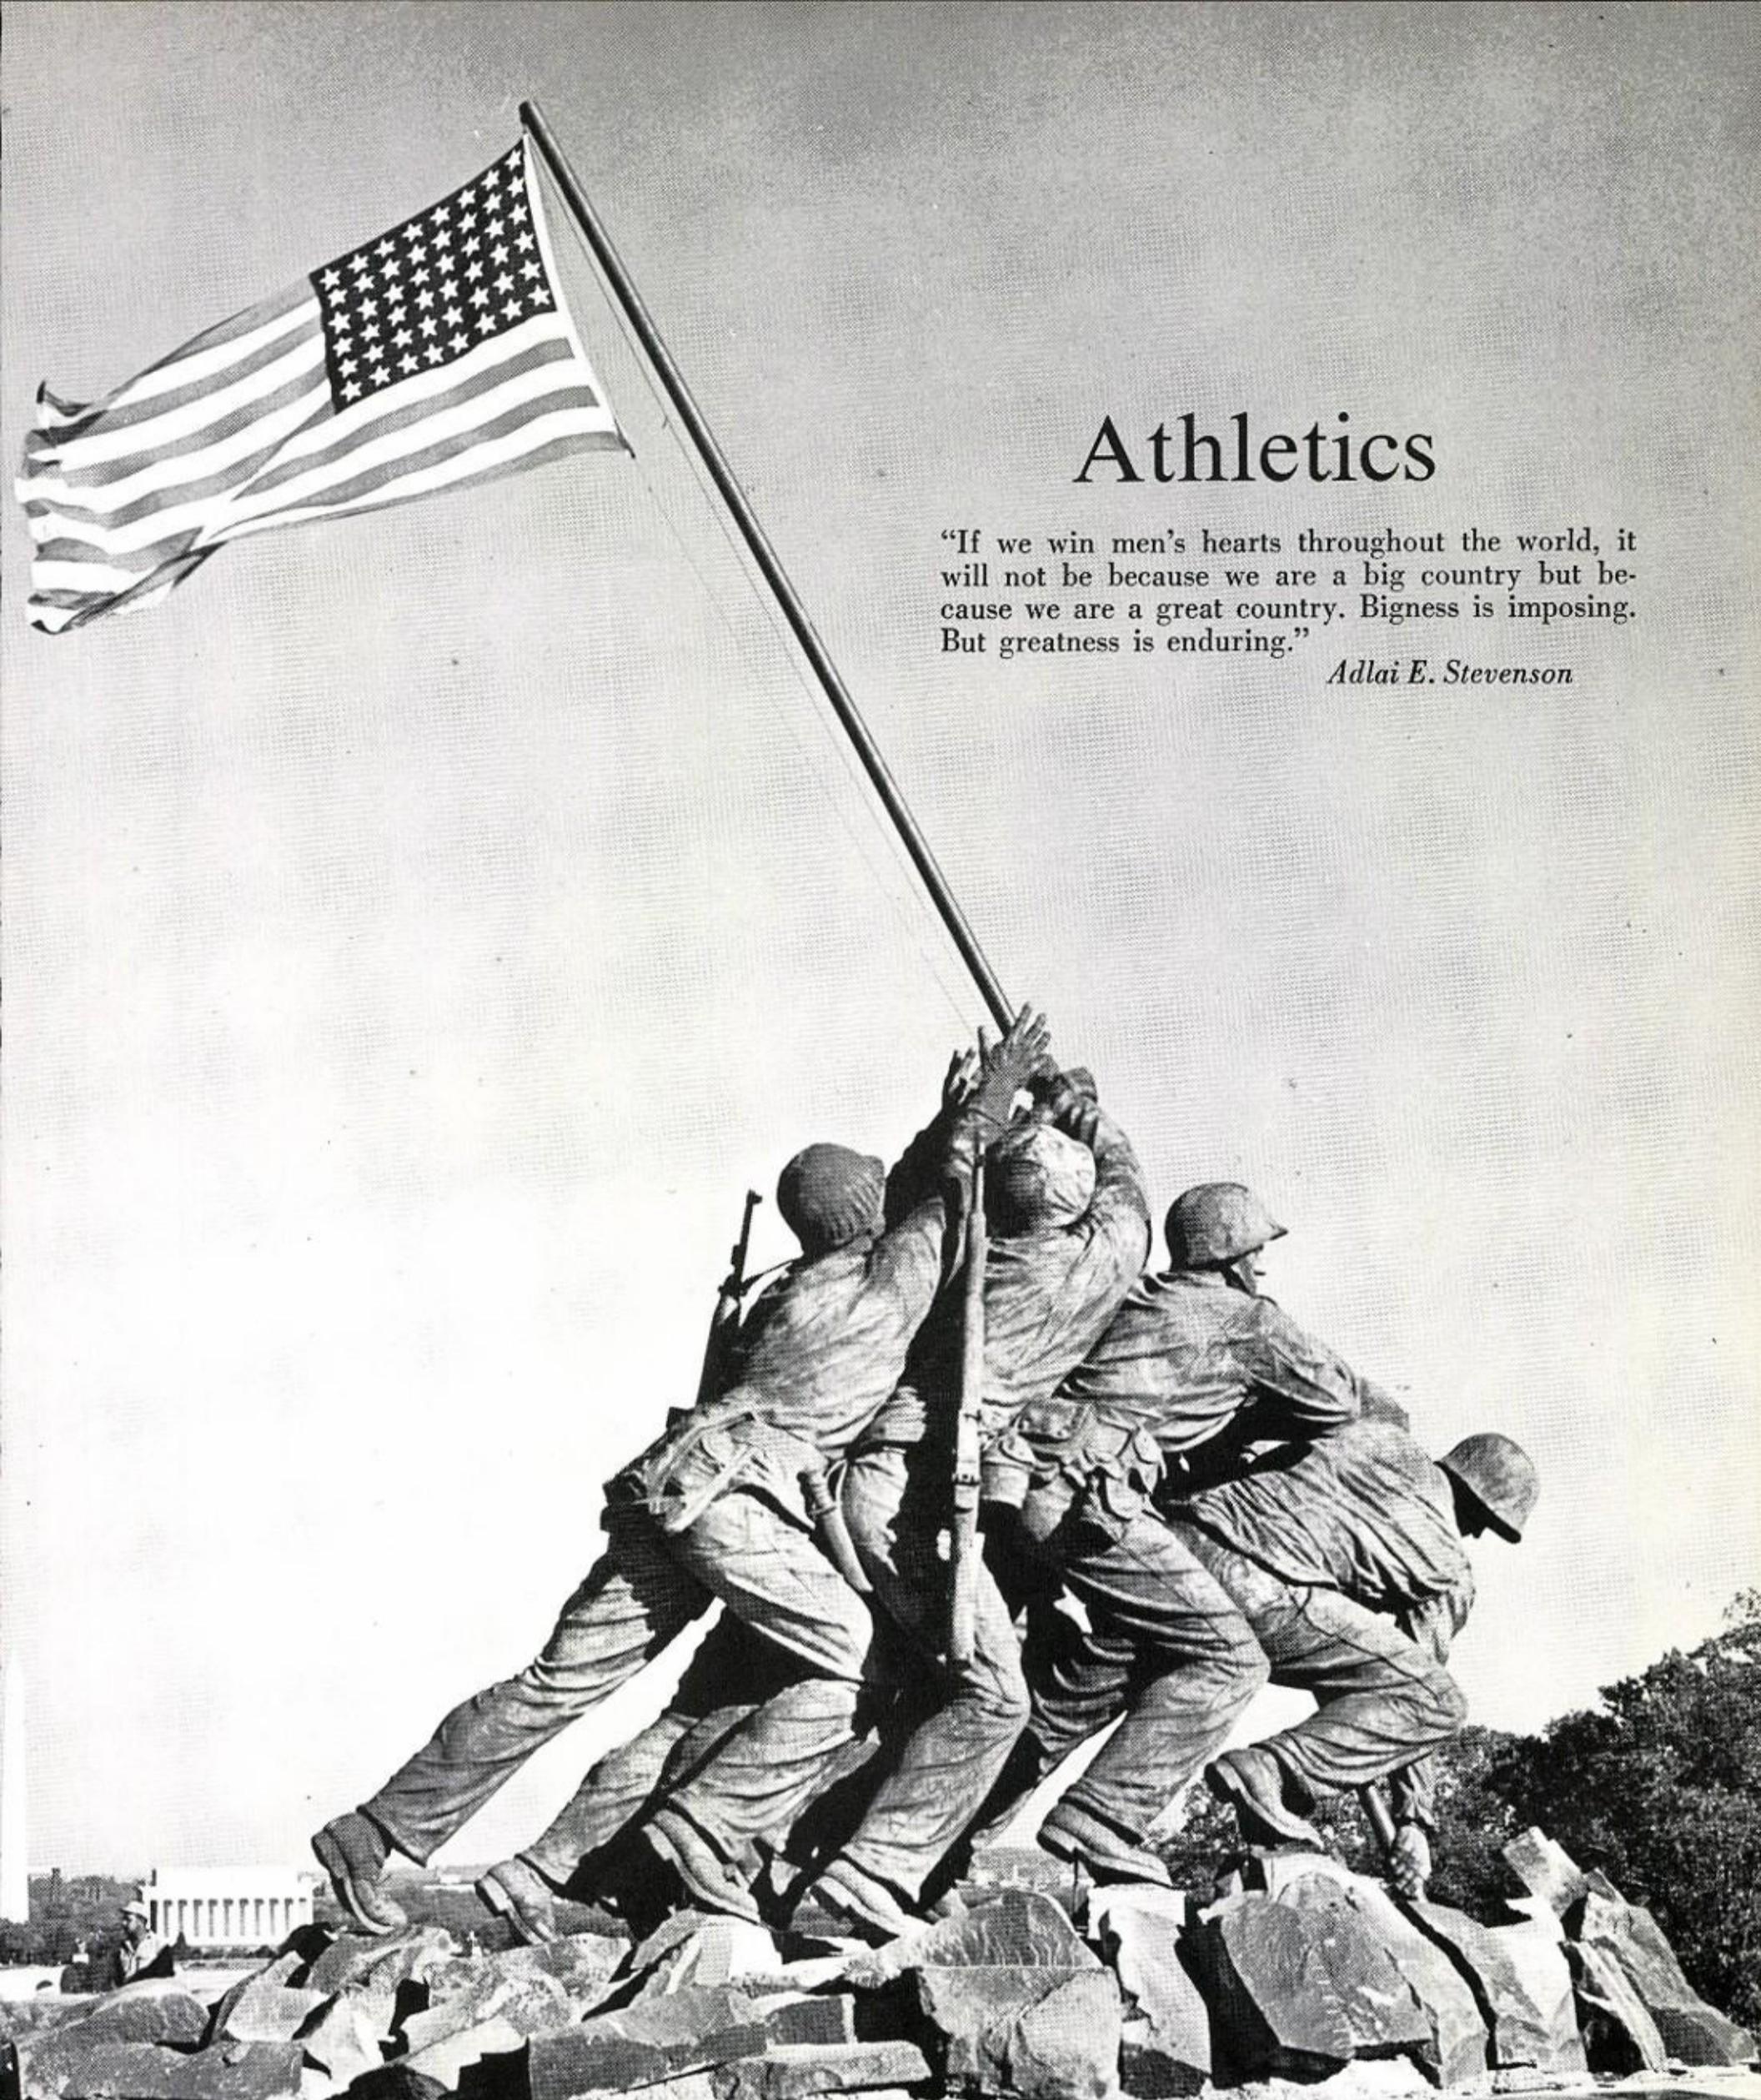

"The Moving Finger Writes . . ."

I will not follow where the path may lead, but I will go where there is no path and I will leave a trail.

The Game was ended, and the noise at last had died away, and now they gathered up the boys where they in pieces lay. And one was hammered in the ground by many jolt and jar; some fragments have never been found, they flew away so far. They found a stack of tawny hair, some fourteen cubits high; it was the halfback, lying there, where he had crawled to die. They placed the pieces on a door, and from the crimson field, that hero then they gently bore, like soldier on his shield. The surgeon toiled the livelong night above the gory wreck; he got the ribs adjusted right, the wishbone and the neck. He soldered on the ears and toes, and got the spine in place, and fixed a guttapercha nose upon the mangled face. And then he washed his hands and said: "I'm glad that task is done!" The halfback raised his fractured head and cried: "I call this fun!"

LEADERS IN SPIRIT

For the first time these five girls had a leading part in the building of spirit in the stately halls of J.B.J.H. Their love of cheerleading and the fact that they were yelling for the one thing they loved best in the world - BOYS - resulted in the Junior High team's losing only one game.

LITTLE NOISE MAKERS

The Junior High Pep Squad may be little, but they made it up in clamor. They were determined and their determination paid off in the end. These girls deserve recognition as one of the best Junior High Pep Squads in the history of the school.

Up, up with Pirates. You meet them wherever you go. Up, up with Pirates. They're the best kind of folks we know.

PIRATE PEP SQUAD

The 1969-1970 Pirate Pep Squad stood by their boys in victory or defeat. They never gave up even though the odds were against them. These 36 individuals joined together for a common cause - to cheer the Pirates on to victory.
